Why does a certain obvious distinction not figure more centrally in economic theorizing - namely, the distinction between the application of capital in order to increase that capital itself, and its application in order to achieve something worthwhile in the world? Condividi i tuoi pensieri con altri clienti. And then we will need to ask ourselves further: how can we as a society discourage this disconnect rather than strive to maximize it as we have now been doing for many years. RecordNumber:Therefore, to engage in genetic engineering could be interpreted as an abuse of the God-given power of dominion for purely selfish ends that disregard the sanctity of life. As the conventional faith in investment for its own sake continues to grow and dominate the economic practices and institutions of our society, we may well find it ever more difficult to prevent entirely unpredictable crises from arising.
