PLOS Biol 2: e All these groups are also characterized by high mobility and seasonal long-distance migration.

Thus, the negative relationship between body size and geographic range size

Since most of the temperate passerines are migratory species, we think that one of the main reasons of increased BMR in the temperate passerines is their migratory style of life. We put metabolic chambers in boxes made from sound-proofing and heat-insulating foam plastic. Around AM, birds were removed from the chambers, weighed with a precision of 0.
