Other points I have footnoted as it seemed appropriate. It begins with what is prescribed in the Atlantic Charter, the creation of the United Nations, its family of agencies and the international development banks.

David Nokes was a scholar of 18th-century English literature.

Furthermore, what may truly be sustainable in one location or community is rarely applicable and amenable to all locations and communities. In the notebook such changes are characteristically marked by a horizontal line between entries or, less frequently, by the start of a new page, rather than by paragraphing; third, except for insertions and interlineations, I have not. A static piece of research which does not seek change, which does not seek to improve the lives of our people, fails to meet the appropriate ethical standard. Good God! Experiences of research of this kind created an antipathy among me. In this edition I have intended to offer a literal transcription of the text while keeping editorial intrusions to a minimum.
