The response from traditional loss prevention will be to assume that it is the usual suspect – external theft – and move quickly to secure funding for the most recent technological panacea they have come across to deal with this problem. More than likely, they will then not monitor or evaluate the performance of the intervention, and when the next shrinkage crisis emerges, they will begin this cycle. Format: Hardcover Verified Purchase. ItemAdded:NewLossPrevention.GettoKnowUs.The prevailing legal framework may also affect how a business is able to respond to issues of shrinkage. This is a question that has vexed practitioners and researchers for more than 50 years and will continue to do so for the foreseeable future.
